Semi-Official Parisian Paper Insists Goering To Take Chancellor's Post in Peace Move.

PARIS, Jan. 1 .- (UP) -The emi - official newspaper Petit Parisien reported today in a dispatch from Italy that Adolf Hitler s preparing to step down as chancellor of Germany and eliminate nore radical Nazis from his regime in order to persuade the Allies to make peace.

The Petit Parisien's dispatch reviving recent Anglo-French reports which were branded by the Germans as Allied propaganda, said that Field Marshal Hermann Goering would become chancellor, and that Hitler would become president of the Reich.

art will be opened with prayer Judge John L. Cone, who will preside over the new court, said last night Dr. Marshall L. Mott, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, would lead the prayer. Mayor Hartsfield also has been invited to present.

The court was set up by city council to handle traffic cases ex-clusively. It will be located on the second floor of the police station in the old police committee room. Charlie Turner, record clerk in the traffic bureau for the past two and one-half years, yesterday was named cashier for Judge Cone's court.

They Begin New Year by Getting Married BUSINESS ENTERS

This young couple—Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes—eloped to Marietta yesterday and thus became the first Atlantans to be wed in 1940. Here the husband reads his wife's palm—predicting a happy married life. The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth Glazier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse B. Glazier, 200 Warren street, N. E. They were married by a Marietta minister. They delayed the marriage a few days so they could be married on New Year's Day.

Disuniting the States.

The growing tendency of many states to erect barriers, on one pretext or another, to trade with sister states, is viewed with genuine alarm by students of economic and commercial trends. They see in this, if it is not halted, an ultimate breaking of the unity of the states of the union, a reversion to the trade rivalries of the thirteen original states and the tariff wars of the Balkan areas.

There can be no doubt that the practice even as far as it has gone, has seriously interfered with trade within the United States and has encouraged many undesirable rivalries between sister commonwealths.

Few states are guiltless in this matter. Where Wisconsin has levied prohibitive tariffs against oleomargarine, thus penalizing the cottonseed oil of the south, Georgia has levied discriminatory fees against out-of-state truckers and has placed heavier taxes upon wines from outside the state than upon those produced within her

California and Florida are not the only states which have placed border guards to keep out tourists of the type they consider undesirable and apt to swell their own relief problems, though their border guards have been more publicized than most

Many state inspection regulations, coupled with fees, were originally installed for legitimate purposes of health and protection, but have since degenerated into a means, but thinly disguised, of keeping out-of-state products from competing with home grown, or made

One of the most startling examples of state trade jealousy occurred when Rhode Island officials ordered red dye poured into all Vermont milk which crossed the border so that Rhode Island consumers would be deterred from buying other than Rhode Island milk.

It is an unfortunate and dangerous tendency. It is earnestly to be hoped that some means may quickly be found to eradicate these interstate hindrances to free trade and that the idea of commercial rivalry, tariffs, disguised or otherwise, and other impositions by one state upon another, may be soon forgotten.

Free trade, in the fullest sense, is the surest guarantee of unity between states while every violation of the free trade principle is a retrogressive step, a step down the road which ultimately leads to rivalries, jealousies, suspicions and wars such as those which have been the rule in European history.

Beavers On Dam Strike

The Interior Department has received with disappointment-but not disillusionment-the news that Billy the Beaver has walked off a federal project. And thereby comes the sequel to a tale that made pleasant reading in the news recently, especially for critics of the New Deal who chaff at what they term "new fan-"gled ideas."

Billy, with three other beavers, was placed in the Shenandoah National Park. The idea—that is, the high hopes of officials of the Interior Department-was that Billy and his co-workers would build a lot of dams and be happy in their task, the important one of conservation of soil.

Things happened rapidly. Two of the beavers quit, right off the bat-or rather, right off the dam. Billy and his wife, however, remained on the job, showing plenty of that good old national parks spirit. Then it happened. Billy and his wife quit, to start work on a dam of their own.

The quitting of Billy and Mrs. Billy was in the nature of a setback for the conservationists. But they recovered quickly. The pointed with pride to the state of Idaho, where the beavers are doing really excellent work. And there are no prospects of the Idaho beavers leaving their jobs.

While there is humor in the situation regarding Billy, the idea behind putting the beavers to work is serious. The government contends that beavers, by building dams under federal protection, can help a lot in halting soil

In the case of Billy, perhaps he needs a college education. It might be a good idea for his wife to take a few academic courses, too.

Who Said Censorship?

There is, in Naziland today, a censorship in regard to news dispatches which are sent from there to other countries. That is admitted. The censors are busy in Britain and France. in Italy and Russia, too.

But William L. White, special correspondent, is writing from Germany and some of the comment he makes is more revelatory about conditions there than tens of thousands of the kind of critical words the censor would undoubtedly delete.

Correspondent White doesn't worry about military information, official communiques or the views of high-ranking secretariats. He likes to mingle with Fritz, Carl and Johann on the street and report their conversations, write a little about how they impressed him.

The White articles are appearing exclusively, for this territory, in The Constitution. They provide just about the most illuminating material on Europe, of any correspondence. And they are, emphatically, entertaining.

They are written in the style the average American best understands, which means there is in all probability more told between the lines than in the words themselves. White writes, not in indelible ink, but upon the imagination and the wit of his reader. Which, probably, is why his articles pass the censorship, untouched. For the usual censor is a man rather matterof-fact, mentally stodgy. He can follow rules and regulations, but that is about all.

He might catch between-the-line writings in invisible ink. But he hasn't a chance with the White method. For White's invisible writing is on the quick wits and the imaginations of his American readers. He must stick those letters of his in the mail with tongue in cheek for the censor.

Mr. White, having spent time in and written from Italy and Germany, soon will tell of conditions in Finland. One thing is sure, wherever he is, his letters will be interesting and worth anyone's reading. Remember, though, when you read, look for the hinted stuff between the lines. Use your imagination.

Faster, Safer Trains.

That there has been a remarkable improvement in railroad passenger service of recent years is evident to the most casual of observers. Much of this, undoubtedly, is due to the development of competitive forms of transportation, particularly the public bus and the private automobile. Undoubtedly improvements would have come had the railroads continued to enjoy the practical monopoly which they enjoyed prior to the development of modern automotive vehicles, but equally without doubt the improvements would not have come so soon or so rapidly. There need, however, be no apology by the roads on this score, competition is a beneficial prod to all forms of business and public service.

The extent of the advance made in passenger rail service is emphasized, however, by study of a few statistics. They are furnished by the Association of American Railroads and may be taken at face value, without question. It is shown, for instance, during the past decade fatalities to railroad passengers have averaged only one for each 1.493.000,000 miles traveled. If an imaginary individual traveled at the rate of 60 miles an hour, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, it would take 2,850 years to cover such a distance. Thus it appears that, barring death by old age, such a traveler would be far safer on the train than in his own home. Or

The speed of American trains has increased. too. One large system alone has more regularly scheduled mile-a-minute mileage than is the total for any foreign country. The daily mileage covered at a speed of 60 miles per hour is now 54,956. In 1930 that total was only 1,100 miles and in 1928 there wasn't a single run in the United States scheduled at such a speed, from start to finish, except one or two short commuter runs in New Jersey.

The coming of air conditioning, of streamlined trains and of many other conveniences, comforts and luxuries is rapidly making train travel in the United States an undertaking incomparably more attractive than it was, even half a dozen years ago.

Grim humor appears to be a specialty of the fighting Finn, and as things get a little better he may set up a puppet people's government for the Russians

Among other Nazi novelties, Germany claims the world's most powerful explosive. No other nation can hold a candle to it, which is a poor idea at best.

FREE SPEECH IS THE VITAL ISSUE

(From The Philadelphia Enquirer.)
It isn't necessary to condone the acts and policies of John L. Lewis to protest the arbitrary and un-American tactics of the rival union official who has banned mention of the Lewis name in all theatrical productions in Chicago. The head of the Musicians' Union in that city is directing his splenetic move at the CIO leader in this particular instance, but actually his target is son much more important than John L. Lewis: it is the constitutional guaranty of free speech. When a petty labor chief can say to a theater producer that this or that must come out of a play or the curtain won't go up, he is striking at freedom of speech. It is a reference to John L. Lewis that is objectionable to the union head at this time; who can say what he will rule out tomorrow or the next day? A somewhat more farcical censorship measure was the abortive attempt of councilmen in Cambridge. Mass., to place a public taboo on the words "Lenin" and "Leningrad." Neither name was to be permitted in newspapers, magazines or text-books entering the town, and "St. Petersburg" was to be substituted for the present name of the old

Russian capital. It was the brilliant thought of the sponsors of this ban that it would help stamp out Communism, although how or why it should was not explained. Happily, this censorship absurdity has been with-

That it was even seriously considered in the first place makes it a fitting companion piece for the episode in Chicago. There are many who will sympathize with Union Leader Petrillo in his opposition to John L. Lewis, just as most Americans will agree heartily with the Cambridge council members that Communism should be stamped out. But fighting Lewis by prohibiting the mention of his name, and "stamping out" Communism by ordering Leningrad pronounced "St. Petersburg" are tactics that no intelligent American can com-

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

MAN OF THE YEAR WASHINGTON, Jan. 1 .- On August 25 and again on September 2, the door of the cabinet room was thrown open, the usher solemnly announced "the President of the United States," and Franklin Delano Roosevelt joined his colleagues without a cheerful greeting. He had been lighthearted enough in the fearful domestic crisis with which his first term began. Even he could not smile in the face of the world catastrophe with which his second term is ending.

But it takes more than a world catastrophe to get the President down. This amazing man is once more the American man of the year. His administration has been eventful and exhausting. The world he knows and we know seems to be crumbling before our eyes. And he is still riding the whirlwind as though he had learned this difficult form of horsemanship on his boyhood pony at Hyde

Currently, he is directly supervising the State Department, reading the foreign cables three times a day, receiving regular personal reports by telephone from his ambassadors abroad, and making all final decisions in the vital field of foreign affairs. He is also serving, unofficially, and as a pastime, as his own secretary of the navy, and enjoying it so much that he frequently finds time to plan the movements of the neutrality coast patrol. He has just finished preparing the federal budget, and is working on his budget message and his message to congress on the state of the union.

Then, besides these special and temporary preoccupations, he is also performing all the ordinary duties of the most arduous office in the world.

He is watching over personnel, receiving and passing on reports from the multifarious departments and agencies, resurveying his farm program and thinking about new taxes. He is planning his strategy for the coming session of congress, and discussing the principal legislative issues with the appropriate leaders. He is also acting as the political leader of his party, and pondering the difficult problem of his own and the party's future.

ZEST FOR HIS WORK The strange thing is that he continues to tackle his huge job with visible zest.

A year ago, this was ceasing to be so. The New Deal program had been enacted and still the times were out of joint. The purge had proved a sorry failure. The Democratic party was split from hell to breakfast. New ideas and new remedies were not easy to come by. Then he often seemed tired and gray, and a little sour.

He is often tired now, and he has aged conspicuously in the last two years, but the sourness has disappeared. The war has saddened him, and he makes his jokes less often. Yet, by giving him new issues to face and new questions to decide, it has somehow renewed his energies.

His energies are really incalculable. During an acute stage of the pre-war crisis, for example, SEC Chairman Jerome N. Frank called on him to report on plans for handling possible panic in the securities market. After Frank had declared that the "fire escapes were ready," and these had been discussed in detail, he rose to go. He knew the President was immensely busy, and he was really concerned when the President made him sit down again and explain at great length the SEC's pet scheme of a brokerage bank to serve as a central depository of the brokerage houses. The President's subordinates often have this kind of experience.

TO LIVE IS TO FUNCTION. You may question the Roosevelt judgment. You may regard the Roosevelt measures as little better than ruinous to the country. You may accuse the man of superficiality or light-mindedness or any of the other crimes in the calendar. But, if you are reasonable, you cannot withhold admiration for the gusto and force, the personal stamina, and the appetite for work which he has in such overflow-

The key to the man is to be found, perhaps, in a talk he had a year or so ago with one of his cronies and advisers. one of the New Dealers who make a cult of the great Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. He mentioned to the President Holmes' oftenrepeated dictum that the principal pleasure of man is "to function." The President agreed enthusiastically, adding that he had often thought how much better it was, for a man accustomed to public life to have all the trouble of making decisions than to experience the frustration of watching others make them. This may-or may not-throw some light on the question of the hour most personal to the President, which is whether he will desire to go on making the decisions after 1940.

OLD HICKORY AND THE SUGAR BOWL. NEW ORLEANS, each of the annual Jackson Day dinners I like to go through a period Democratic Governor of Illinois, has filed a $250,000 libel suit against Frank Knox, Republican, of preparation. This includes the reading of a book, usually the rereading of one of Marquis James' two books on Jackson. year it seemed fitting to journey to some scene of a triumph by Old Hickory, and there to pay homage to him.

In fact it was Mr. Earl Mann, the baseball president, who sug-

"I plan to attend the Jackson Day dinner," he said, "and I think it would be well to make a pilgrimage to some place where Old Hickory served his country and the people."

This seemed an excellent idea. I held out for the Hermitage, at Nashville. Nearby is Clover Bottoms, where the famous race track was located. Andrew Jackson once bet his shirt on one of his horses. Also, not far away is the site of the famous duel. There, too, is the old Maxwell house, down the steps of which Andrew Jackson once knocked a foe with a well-directed blow to the chin.

Mr. Mann listened with interest. In fact, he seemed almost con-Then he began to argue. He declared for New Orleans, where Old Hickory and a collection of volunteers from Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi defeated the British, the very flower of the British troops, to drive the British forever from the soil of the United States.

So, that was how it came about that at 4:25 on New Year's morning, Mr. Mann and your correspondent boarded a plane, saw the sun rise out of Montgomery, and landed in New Orleans three hours out of Atlanta

It seems there is a football game here called the Sugar Bowl game, but Mr. Mann and I resolutely went about the business of following the trail of Old Hickory.

THE HOUSE OF OLD HICKORY. We had coffee with the people who live in the house where Andrew Jackson spent the night on his arrival in New Orleans. We went out to a portion of the old battlefield. There we cheered the memory of Old Hickory and his volunteers who whipped the best professional soldiers of Europe

We saw the bar where Old Hickory had his brandy. We saw the room where Old Hickory met with the representatives of Jean LaFitte, the pirate. Jean LaFitte and his gunners and riflemen did yeoman service in the cause of democracy.

Since the time of Jackson all the pirates have been in the Republican ranks. There were more pirates in the Harding administration, for instance, than in all the ranks of Jackson's gunners. The breed of pirate is not as honest today as it was when Jean LaFitte was one of its prominent members. He fought for Jackson.

We saw old letters of Jackson, and some of his personal belongings, although most of those are at the Hermitage, the spot he loved

About noon Mr. Mann began to grow restive. He began to grow weary, and want to rest. It was at this moment that Mr. Horace Renegar, a Jacksonian Democrat who is publicity man for Tulane University, came along.

"Are you going to the Sugar Bowl game?" he asked.

"We came to see and do honor to Andrew Jackson," said Mr. "Who is playing in the game?" he added as an after thought.

"Why Tulane is playing the Texas Aggies, picked by Grantland Rice, another Jacksonian Democrat, as the greatest team in America. I have two tickets here," said Mr. Renegar, suggestively. Your correspondent held out firmly, refusing to go since there was no connection between the game and Andrew Jackson.

"Why," said Mr. Renegar, "you are indeed wrong. The troops of Old Hickory once camped on the site where the game is to be So, of course, we had to go.

THE JACKSON DINNER. Meanwhile, I hope the Democrats in Georgia are preparing to be present

The cost of the dinner is $25, that being the price set for all states. The national committee fixes it. It is high for a dinner, of course, but the idea of the Jackson Day dinner is to permit those Democrats who can contribute to the party through the dinner and in no other manner, so to do. The Jackson Day dinner is not essentially a rally of the party, although it becomes that, but a party to contribute to the party. There are some who seek to evade the dinner, saying Old Hickory would not spend that much for a dinner. He did, of course. He attended similar dinners in honor of Thomas Jefferson, and paid more than $25 per plate. When it came to his party, Old Hickory was liberal with his money and his services. Not all the rank and file can be present, but those who find it in their hearts to contribute to the party of Jefferson and Jackson will be present.

Meanwhile Mr. Mann and I are preparing to go with Mr. Renegar and see where Old Hickory's troops camped. The football game may interfere a bit with the view, but, we trust, not too much

When Adults Are Enslaved. Their Children Are Born Into Slavery

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

Mr. Roosevelt alarmed Moley by declaring: "I am the issue." Yet he spoke the historical truth, and thus revealed a dangerous flaw in our method of dealing with public affairs.

A leader attracts a following by advocating some plan or principle that is popular; but if he has force enough to win, his personality usually overshadows his principle. If Leader Jones advocates liberty, his cause gives him his start; but it is not long before people cease to be pro-liberty or anti-liberty and become pro-Jones

Whether Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate or not, his personality is likely to overshadow the campaign and election; for we have reached the state wherein any discussion of public affairs seems a sly declaration for or against Roosevelt.

This is doubly unfortunate in the present circumstances, for the issue we must face-calmly now or in passion later-is of greater importance than any individual. Roosevelts come and go, filling the foreground for a time and then retiring to the history books, but freedom once lost is seldom regained except by force.

All literate adults, regardless of party or principles, know that the government in Washington has enormously increased its powers and its control of the people within the last seven years. As Mr. Roosevelt himself expressed it: "We have built up new instruments Indeed we have! There are more than three score commissions, ne of them with dictatorial powers, not one of them answerable to the people. Moreover, congress has given the chief executive dictatorial powers, which Mr. Roosevelt himself says would be dangerous "in other hands." Now, power and freedom are opposites, one declining as the other increases, and these new powers were given the governmnt without the approval or understanding of the people. Very few realin what degree they now, may be controlled by commissions not elected by the people or authorized by the constitution. Whether a Republican or Democrat is elected will make little difference 20 years from now, if the present system continues, but what is done about these new government powers will make all the difference between freedom and submission to masters.

Power grows of itself, freedom lives only by the eternal watchfulness of the people. Regardless of good intentions, efficiency or seeming necessity, increase of power is as dangerous as a plague. Dislike or worship Mr. Roosevelt as you will, but preserve liberty for your chil-

Announcement: The partners of Ginn and Company, 15 Ashburton Place, Boston, Massachusetts, announce that they have unanimously decided upon the incorporation of their business, thus effecting dissolution of the partnership of Ginn and Company as of December 31, 1939. The business, originally founded by Edwin Ginn in 1867, has remained unincorporated through more than seventy years of successful business experience. It has long been one of the few partnerships of comparable size in any such field of enterprise. The entire assets and business of the partnership have been transferred to a Massachusetts corporation of the same name, which has assumed all liabilities of the partnership. The business of publishing and distributing books and similar supplies for schools and colleges as formerly conducted by the partnership, will be carried on hereafter by the corporation, the personnel remaining unchanged. HE'S BUSY Her Philadelphia tavern-operator husband's "too busy," says gorgeous Jean Vickers, of Manhattan night spot fame, so she wants her freedom. R. K. McClain is the gentleman's name.

HELLO So this is baby! For the very first time, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rickard visit their incubator baby girl, born December 9 in a Providence (R. I.) hospital. She weighs 2 lbs.

OH, WELL! Always there waiting every January 1 for the first presidential handshake, Chipper John W. Hunefeld, Peter-Pannish house-painter, had to content himself yesterday with a White House cop, instead of Mr. R. (Story on Page 4.)

HERE'S PROOF

Maybe you've wondered if it's true what they say about the Finns capturing those Russian tanks. So here's a radiophoto from the northern front, Helsinki's warriors clustered around some Red war-turtles they've taken over during the Soviet "blitzfizzle." (Story on Page 1)

WOO-WOO! Rolling those thousand-watt eyes of hers into double wing-back man-killer formation, here's an unusual shot of Brenda Frazier, Gotham's glamour gal No. 1 of the late lamented 1939.

ALL SET

Her lovely larynx all shipshape for the singing of Lakme at Manhattan's Met Saturday, here's little Lily Pons, gleaming in her 20-pound costume of dark red-gold crushed lame. Lily weighs 95.

JOB JUGGLER Mayor of Memphis for five fleeting seconds yesterday was Boss Ed Crump (right), master mind of regional politics. Then, surrounded thus on a railroad platform, he resigned and advised council to elect Representative Walter Chandler in his place. It was a coup. (Story on Page 2.)

GANGWAY! One side, Gents, it's Tennessee's Mister Coffman lugging the leather, and he's loose for a first down in that Rose Bowl tussle with the Trojans. The lad barged on past Stoecker (68) and was steaming along in high when Grenny Lansdell finally laid him low. (Story on Page 1)

Miss Beatrice Piassick, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. I. Piassick, became the bride of Manuel Wolbe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Wolbe, last evening at the Jewish Progressive Club.

Rabbi Harry Epstein officiated at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple. As the guests were assembling and during the ceremony a musical program was presented by a group of musicians.

The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar, the bridal couple standing under a white canopy decorated with lilies of the valley. On either side of the altar were palms and fern and pedestal baskets filled with white

The dress was trimmed with a bow of the same material on the shoulder and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of vari-colored flowers. Mrs. Sam Shavin, of Rome, twin sister of the bride, was matron of honor and was gowned in a model of aqua crepe fashioned with a V neckline, a shirred waist and a long full skirt. Her flowers were similar to those carried by the maid of honor.

The bridesmaids were Misses Helen Hellman, Blumie Wolbe, Shirley Abrahams, Louise Mae Krieger, and Mrs. Aaronette Swerdlin. They were all gowned alike in blue satin models made with sweetheart necklines, bustle backs and long full skirts. Their flowers were old-fashioned nose-gays of pastel shaded flowers.

Miss Selma Piassick, sister of the bride, and Ruth Oxman were junior bridesmaids and wore gowns similar to those worn by the bridesmaids. Ila Stern, of Columbus, was the flower girl, and was gowned in pink net made bouffant style. Allen Charles Piassick, dressed in white satin,

Holidays Are Over-Back to Budgets and Wholesome Menus

Casserole Dish Is a Meal In Itself By Sally Saver.

With holidays behind us and everybody happy about the whole thing, we can settle down and look forward to some weeks of simple living. Plain, wholesome foods are in order, and they will serve a double purpose; to con-trast comfortably with holiday fare and give the budget opportunity to recoup.

Beans are hearty and simple and quite inexpensive, and com-bined in interesting ways with other foods they are worthy of a place as main dish for many

A casserole of beans with pork chops is shown today. Veal chops or hamburger steak could be used too, but here's the way to go about preparing the casserole with pork chops.

Modern Code MY DAY: Faith Makes Life Bearable for Man Bearable for Many

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON .- While it seems to have been a very long day, it has all been spent travelling to Winchester, Va., and back again At 5:30 a. m. my telephone rang and Franklin Jr.'s voice said: "I have some bad news for you. Ethel and I cracked up." Cracking up means an airplane accident to me, but I knew they had gone to stay with friends in Virginia to go to a dance, and so they must have been in their car. I elicited the information that they were not badly hurt and then decided that I had better refrain from further questions and get up and go to the hospital in Winchester, Va. I arrived there at 8 o'clock, apparently to the surprise of everyone in the hospital. No one was more surprised than Franklin Jr., who announced: "I didn't mean to have you come." After X-rays had been taken and nothing serious was found to be the matter, we put blankets around them and bundled them into two White House cars and drove back to the White House, arriving at 4 p. m. Now they are resting and I hope a few days will see them on their feet again. The Lord was good and we should all be very grateful.

Everyone at the hospital was so very tired, even the people in the waiting room were solicitous. One couple was waiting while their little boy had his tonsils out. The man came over to me to say how sorry they were about the accident and then he added:
"We had some bad luck, too, last week. Our little 5-year-old girl stepped in front of a car and was killed. It wasn't anyone's fault.
I guess these things just happen to all of us." Whereupon his wife broke in and said: "But, Mrs. Roosévelt, we are poor people and when I found I was going to have another baby, I just wondered how we could take care of it. It was just a month old when my little girl was killed and I think God just knew I would need something to take care of to take up my mind.'

Such is the faith which makes life bearable for many people whose sorrows otherwise would be overwhelming.

It was fortunate for me that I had planned to go to New York city this afternoon and only had a debutante luncheon here before leaving. My mother-in-law was able to be hostess for this luncheon given for her great-niece, Peggy Houghteling, and I have put off my engagements in New York city tomorrow for some later day when I can fly up for a few hours.

It is wonderful how easy it is to change one's plans when one has someone at the other end of the telephone to do the work. All I did was to telephone Miss Thompson and ask her to do all the arranging. As usual, all I can do in return is to be thankful for the things which everybody from Miss Thompson right through the household has done to make things easier for us. Perhaps I owe my chief thanks to the chauffeur, whom I got out of bed at 5:30 and who came with as cheerful a smile as usual, to meet me at the

Under some circumstances any fuel burning may produce some carbon monoxide. Therefore it is always best to have pipe connecting with chimney flue or carrying the combustion products out of the house. It is always dangerous to use any fuel-burning heater without such pipe in a small bedroom. Electric heat is safe in this respect—does not produce carbon dioxide or carbon monoxide nor consume oxygen.

Clever New Year Greeting Cards Are Sent by Popular Bachelor Trio

By Sally Forth.

THOSE three clever bachelors, Stan Ashley, Ray Moore and Charlie Parham, failed to send Christmas cards this year, thereby disappointing their friends who were looking forward to receiving something unusual and ingenious. Trust these three to do something out of the ordinary—they are sending New Year's cards instead:

They are cream-colored folders with the edges decorated with a series of mile posts designating the football season, the hunting season, the first and second Thanksgiving days, "Gone With the Wind," and Christmas.

TIMMONS GOES OVER FOR TIGERS AS 20,000 WATCH

Lukachik Kicks Field Goal; Neelymen Hold in Shadow of Goal.

By JAKE WADE,

Charlotte Observer Sports Editor. COTTON BOWL, DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 1.—Clemson College's Tigers and Boston Colege's Eagles did everything except pull rabbits out of their headgears and carve the referee in half as they entertained 20,000 shivering and pop-eyed spectators with a bruising bewildering football spectacle here

At the end the Rebel Bengals from the South Carolina hills were on top of the sharp-shooting New England Catholics by the count of 6 to 3, thanks mainly to the dev-astating running of Sophomore Charlie Timmons and an inspired defense in the gloaming against a rolling Boston team of cunning, speed and power.

Old Daddy Long-Legs, All-American Banks McFadden, was the central figure in the magnificent wouldn't-be-taken barrier brown up by the Tigers against the spectacular fourth-quarter aeal barrage laid down by Chuckin Charlie O'Rourke, a slender but by no means fragile halfback who seemed able to throw that ball all the way across the state of Texas, 26-YARD FIELD GOAL. A 26-yard field goal by Alex ukachik furnished the Eagles three points early in the second quarter and Timmons, sparkling with his biggest day in a season of many big days, paced a 58-yard drive for the Clemson touchdown, himself finally bucking 2 yards for the score. McFadden's 16-yard pass-gainer to Wister Jackon was the big number in the tirring march.

This also came in the second quarter, but it remained for the fourth chukker to furnish the main fireworks, even though it failed to yield a score. O'Rourke was wielding his rubber arm in that session. His comrades were col-laborating in flossy, deceptive plays that at times swept the Ben-gals off their feet. The Eagles knocked constantly at Clemson's door but in the twilight the South Carolinians rose to heights in mi-

SYNOPSIS.

Greatly relieved that she is leaving behind the constant fear of Nazi bombers. Claire Dutton stands on the deck of the French liner St. Croix, awaiting the arrival of her boss, William Amherst Cameron—"dear Bill." Secretly to Claire. Bill Cameron, diplomatic liaison officer who is responsible only to the President, has been delayed by a last minute conterence in Paris. The minutes pass, Claire knows she can't return home without Bill, and when the gangplank is about to be lowered, she rushes to her cabin with a porter and gets her four bags to which were affixed diplomatic seals so there would be no delay when they docked in New York in leaving for Washintgon. She decides to return to Paris and when a chauffeur puts her bags in his taxi she discovers there are live. One is an exact duplicate of her overnight bag, Mystified, she goes direct to the American embassy in Paris and Welles Sanford, an attache, phones the Surete Generale, Pierre Bornet responds and on opening the fifth bag finds only a cardboard carton containing what he says is a highly inflammable powder capable of destroying the St. Croiz. Spies he says, duplicated the bag and the diplomatic seal, knowing that it would not be searched. The powder, Bornet tells Bill Cameron's private secretary, would have eaten through the carton in a day or two, then the bag, and would have caused a raging fire which it would have been impossible to control.

One boat was out in front and the flower sails of all the boats on the sea of flowers appeared to be wind-filled.

As noted, only once was the Tennessee team functioning in true Volunteer style. And then a fumble ruined it all. A tie game possibly hung on that fumble.

AMAZING COMMUNITY, ANYWAY.

Before the Rose Bowl game was scheduled to get under way, a depreted to the rounded to get under way, and it on the football today as in the football today as in the Tennessee defense with the regularity and power of the waves that wash in from the near-by Pacific, the Trojans inundated the men from the south to win this 25th line and the Mercer Bears.
